COVER STORY: Transport yourself to the warehouse district where the air is filled with the cacophony of men and machines hard at work, handling the commercial goods that are brought in daily. But for now, on this sun-drenched dock, a group of workers take a well-deserved break, exchanging tales of the day's labor while the clatter of a train can be heard in the distance. Minutes later, the tracks beside them begin to hum, foretelling the arrival of the next delivery. Find out more about our new Vintage Brick Warehouse, seen on the cover, by turning to page 24.

To the right, workers gather near towering silos, as a hopper sits nearby, ready to unload a delivery of pellets. Details on our two new Plastic Pellet Facilities can be found on pages 22 & 23.

Lighted $139.98 Each

NEW Plastic Pellet Plant

$99.98 Each

New materials are developed every day, but plastic remains one of the most versatile and useful creations of the 20th century. Plastic pellet plants process raw or recycled material into pellets for countless downstream uses, from soda straws to model trains. You can model this industry on your layout by shipping plastic pellets from this facility in covered hoppers, such as the newly tooled Walther's Mainline® ACF 5250 4-Bay covered hoppers (910-49200 to 49219, sold separately). Featuring four tall storage silos, a large brick and metal processing structure, rooftop air conditioners, and a loading rack with piping, this facility makes an impressive addition to any scene. Pellets are shipped in covered hoppers, stored in vertical tanks, and moved to the factory using pneumatic compressed air piping. Designed to fit eras from the 1970s to the present, this industry is a realistic and visually striking addition to modern layouts.

- Large brick and metal processing structure with truck-loading doors, front office doors and windows, and rooftop air conditioners
- Four tall storage silos
- Loading rack with piping for two railroad cars
- Overhead walkways
- Decal signs
